the university. From President Hadley m he is to succeed this June; from William H. Taft, Yale's most illustrious alumnus, and from graduates of the classes ranging from '57 to '22, Dr. Angell, himself a graduate of the University of Michigan, received an unmistakable and hearty acceptance as Yale's new leader.

If there was any lack of warmth in the reception which Yale men gave the news that the university corporation had chosen a man not an alumnus of Yale, it was completely lost in the heartness of greeting accorded Dr. Angell last night, and the warm assurance Cheek on Expansion.

The day declared American colleges had just started on a third period of their history—ne period of coordination, "in which they cooperate toward the solution of a common problem of national education, of whose dawn we already see the first signs."

The first period he said, was one of isolation of the separate institutions, which extended until evil war times, to be followed by a period of competition recently ended.

"We are working on a great national problem—one where cooperation must be day held in the present situation must be the man, who knows the large elements which should guide our choice of active littles rather than the local cases which microte best how we can carry them cut. The local knowledge he can get from others, the national situation of $100,000 and $10 the Yale Corporation has also recognized something else that is necessary for its successful solution—the intellectual kinahip among all colleges and all college men who work together for a commen
